Menuhin Acquires Unknown Violin Concerto By Mendelssohn

Yehudi Menuhin, violinist, revealed in New York that he had acquired from a descendant of Felix Mendelssohn a violin concerto by the composer that is unknown to the world of music. The concerto, in D minor, was written in 1822, when Mendelssohn was thirteen, according to Mr. Menuhin, twenty-two years before he composed his only other known violin concerto, the Concerto in E minor, which is among the most widely admired works in musical literature.

Mr. Menuhin said he first heard of the concerto in January, by letter from a friend in London while he was on tour in Switzerland. Acquisition of the manuscript was subsequently arranged through this person, who is a mutual friend of Mr. Menuhin and of Mendelssohn's descendant, reports the New York Herald Tribune. Mr. Menuhin, denying that he wanted to appear "mysterious," said he preferred not to disclose the names of those involved in the transaction. He mentioned only that the descendant was "a very aged lady."

Mr. Menuhin relaxed in an armchair, running a strong rubber band through his supple fingers, as he described his discovery. "It's a very sweet work," he said. "It's extremely romantic. It's extremely exuberant. It's very short; probably the whole thing takes only six, seven, eight minutes.

"I might think of playing it next season," he mused. "As a curiosity and as a touching thing—a rather amusing thing in between two others." He was concerned lest the piece be thought in any way frivolous: "It has already all the germs — in fact, more than germs — of Mendelssohn's genius."

He unlocked a calfskin portfolio with a key concealed under the flap by a string, and withdrew a manuscript folio. He opened it, disclosing [illegible] in brown ink. He commented on the refined and careful penmanship, done by a boy who, that year, first wore long trousers and had his shoulder-length curls cut short, but who, two years earlier, produced between fifty and sixty movements for piano, strings and men's voices at the age of eleven.

The first page of concerto manuscript is annotated, in English, "Composed for E. Rietz in 1822." Eduard Rietz was then Mendelssohn's teacher. At the upper right hand corner, in a different script, appears the legend, "Von Fran Cecile Mendelssohn-Bartholdy am 24th Mai 1858 zum geschenk erhalten, F. David." Mendelssohn's wife gave Ferdinand David, one of the most influential contemporary violin players and Mendelssohn's close adviser on the Concerto in E score, the manuscript of the earlier concerto six years after her husband's death.

The manuscript runs twenty-four pages, divided into three movements, but only two pages of the final movement are there. Mr. Menuhin concluded that the final portion was lost before it reached David's hands, because he was known to be a meticulous person.

Noted 'Cellist Was Boy Prodigy In Berlin

Prof. Felix Robert Mendelssohn, concert 'cellist and great-grandnephew of the famous composer Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, who fell dead in Baltimore, Maryland, while giving a concert at Cadoa Hall, fled to the U.S. from Nazi Germany in 1936. From 1942 he played with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra. He was playing Dohnanyi's Concert Piece in D major, which he played in its world premiere in Berlin in 1918, when he died.

Professor Mendelssohn was a son of Ludwig Mendelssohn, also a composer. Born in Berlin on September 27, 1896, he was launched on a musical career as a boy. At the age of eight, as a student at the Stern Conservatory, he played a 'cello specially built to match his stature. At 10 he appeared on the concert [illegible] and scored a great success. [illegible] upon a triumphal concert tour of Europe.

Later he taught at the conservatory and conducted its orchestral school. His passion opera, "Christus," was presented by the Philharmonic Orchestra of Berlin shortly after his eighteenth birthday.

After coming to the U.S. he joined New York University and taught the 'cello in its summer school. He gave concerts as conductor of the Mendelssohn String Orchestra, the Queens Chamber Orchestral Society and other groups. In 1946 he was named principal of the Baltimore Institute of Musical Arts.

Israel Takes Steps Against Zealots In Plot

Israeli police began the round-up of a group of religious fanatics after discovery of what was officially described as a plot "to sabotage" the Knesset (Parliament) buildings. Forty-two members of the organization, known as Brith Kanaim (Union of Zealots), were taken into custody. They were said to have planned to throw "scare-bombs" that burn, make smoke and create noise into the Knesset during the night. The discovery near the Knesset of some members of the organization with rags and gasoline uncovered the plot, police said.

The round-up included raids on two religious schools where police said arms caches of pistols, grenades, Molotov cocktails and Sten guns had been found. Some of the instructors at the schools were among those arrested.

Levi Abrahami, Jerusalem police chief, said plans found in the possession of one of the suspects showed that the organization had planned to drop a home-made incendiary smoke bomb from the Knesset gallery on the floor below just as action was to have started on a measure requiring religious women to enter national service, according to the New York Times. The bill had been on the agenda but the House did not get around to it.

The police chief said the bomb had been seized. Plans also showed that the [illegible] zealots planned to cut [illegible] electric wires leading to the building just before the outrage.

The zealots have left pamphlets for car owners and sent letters to other people warning them against desecrating the Sabbath by driving or playing their radios. But the asserted attempt against the Knesset was their first overt act against state institutions. The zealots are [illegible]

The Neturei Karta, of which the Brith Kanaim is believed to be the striking force, does not recognize the state because its establishment in the group's opinion did not conform to biblical prophecies. According to the zealots, the re-establishment of the Jewish people

Hospital Plans New Approach To Health

An unusual health and preventive medicine plan is being conducted experimentally by the Community Service Society, Montefiore Hospital and the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. By it doctors, psychiatric social workers and public health experts will work together to prevent illness and raise the general standard of health in the family, according to Stanley P. Davies, general director of the C.S.S.

It is now limited to selected members of the Montefiore Hospital group of the Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York, and is free of charge. The sponsors hope it may eventually be a model for a general program at nominal cost.

John T. Batura, a fireman; his wife, Anna, and their two children, Barbara, five, and Richard, four, were enrolled at Montefiore Hospital into the Family Health Maintenance Demonstration, as the project is officially called. They filled out various forms and received thorough medical examinations.

During the week, a public health nurse visited the Baturas and discussed diet, recreation habits and other things relating to health. The parents were also interviewed by a social psychiatrist who talked over problems that may have arisen in rearing children or other matters which could cause family tension. Checks will continue periodically.

If any member of the team — doctor, nurse or social worker — finds a problem, an attempt will be made to correct it, either inside the plan or by calling in a specialist. The underlying team-work was stressed by Dr. Martin Cherasky, director of the hospital.

For example, he said, the doctor might find that a boy's tonsils should be removed, but the social worker might find that it would be unwise to take the boy out of school at that particular juncture; the two would compare notes before making their recommendation to the family. Or perhaps the nurse might fail to convince a family that it should change its eating habits in some respect; in that case, the doctor might be able to correct the dietary lack with pills.

The precise details of the plan

U.S. Warns Arab States To Be Temperate

The United States has advised the Arab states it would be in their own interest to avoid inflammatory or intemperate actions with respect to the current hostility between Israel and Syria.

The State Department reported that instructions had gone out to United States missions in six Arab capitals. The orders called on the diplomats to point out to the governments to which they were accredited that "it would be in their interest to refrain from precipitate action prejudicing dispassionate consideration of the Syrian-Israeli dispute in the Security Council."

Michael J. McDermott, State Department press officer, said that the advice was based on reports that planes and anti-aircraft units of Iraq had taken up positions in Syria, presumably to operate against Israel. At the same time, Mr. McDermott said the United States Government had "no knowledge" of reports from Cairo that the United States Ambassador to Egypt, Jefferson Caffrey, had warned the Egyptian Government in a note that Arab military aid to Syria was "a violation of the Rhodes armistice and may provoke Israel again."

"Of such a note we know nothing," the State Department spokesman said. Other officials emphasized that the instructions to the United States diplomats asked them only to urge moderation and did not refer to the Rhodes armistice of February 24, 1949.

The United States missions that were urged to take up the matter with the Arab governments were those in Baghdad, Iraq; Damascus, Syria; Jidda, Saudi Arabia; Amman, Jordan; Beirut, Lebanon; and Cairo, Egypt, reports the New York Times.

The seven Arab League states [illegible] Council adopted a resolution promising full support to Syria in the conflict with Israel over the demilitarized zones on the armistice line and to any other Arab state subject to Israel's "aggression."

The six Arab Leagues states — all but Jordan — which signed last June the Arab collective security pact, were urged to ratify it quickly. The resolution called for a [illegible] staffs of all Arab states to draft defensive plans pending the ratification of the Arab collective security pact. It also suggested that the Arab states study a "suitable attitude and common measures" to be taken against "states participating in endangering their security."

The final section of the resolution obviously included a response to the strong sentiment for complete neutrality between the East and West blocs and the resentment against the policy of the West, which has found widespread expression at Damascus before and during the Arab League meeting. The resolution did not call for mobilization of Arab armed forces in Syria now and left the door wide open for a peaceful solution of the conflict.

The net effect of the resolution is that it leaves for the time being the Security Council free to seek and enforce a solution of the conflict on the Syrian-Israel armistice line.

The vaguely worded fourth section of the Arab League Council contains a not particularly camouflaged threat. The embassies and legations of the United States and other Western powers have all received voluminous reports on proposals made by groups or individual deputies in various Arab parliaments that the Arab states sign treaties with the Soviet Union and cancel oil concessions and otherwise show their displeasure with Western policy with regard to Palestine.

Hardly a day goes by without one newspaper or another in the Arab capitals taking up the same theme and making even more extreme proposals. The suggestion that the Arab states "study all possibilities to take a suitable attitude and to take common measures against states that participate in endangering their security" was meant to be read in the State Department and other foreign ministries against this background, according to the Times.

Israel Resents U.N. Act Placing Major Blame For Conflict With Syria

The United Nations Security Council approved unanimously, except for a Soviet abstention, a comprehensive resolution on the Syrian-Israeli conflict which, among other things, asked Israel to suspend her Huleh marsh drainage project. The latter had been the origin of Israel's friction with Syria. The vote came after Abba S. Eban of Israel had delivered a bitter protest to the Council. He said the resolution unjustly laid the major blame for the fighting on Israel.

He was instructed by his Government to transmit the "profound resentment" of the Israeli people and Government, he added. This was "an insult to our gallant dead" killed by Syrian bullets, he said, and Israel could attach "no moral value and credence" to such an "unjust" presentation of the case.

At this point, Mr. Eban felt faint and had to leave the meeting, which was held in the General Assembly Hall at Flushing Meadow. A physician from a near-by hospital was called and found that Mr. Eban, who had worked most of the preceding night on his speech to the Council, was suffering from nervous exhaustion. After a short rest Mr. Eban recovered and returned to New York before the Council adopted the resolution.

One of Mr. Eban's chief objections to the lengthy resolution had been that it halted a project that would make tillable a large part of that region and greatly reduce the incidence of malaria there. The four sponsors of the resolution replied that it was not their intention to halt the project, but merely to protect the interests of Arab landowners in its path.

The sponsors were Britain, France, Turkey, and the United earlier United Nations requests that Israel suspend the work until "an agreement is arranged through the chairman of the Mixed Armistice Commission for continuing this project."

Israel said that this gave Syria a "veto" on the Huleh project. Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain said that in case of a stalemate, Israel could ask for a conference to revise her armistice agreement with Syria, and if such revision was blocked by Syria, he noted that the present armistice agreement allowed Israel to appeal to the Security Council.

The Security Council could then bestow on Maj. Gen. William E. Riley the authority to step in and take whatever action was necessary, Sir Gladwyn said. General Riley, on loan from the United States Marine Corps, is Chief of Staff of the United Nations Truce Supervision Organization in Palestine.

The sponsors appeared agreed that a satisfactory method could be devised to compensate the Arabs whose lands, totalling about seven acres, lie in the path of the project. Their property is inside the demilitarized zone between Syria and Israel and hence is a matter of special concern to the United Nations.

The resolution should not postpone the Huleh project "at most" more than a few weeks, Sir Gladwyn said. In addition to dealing with this project, the resolution chided Israel for her aerial attack on a Syrian outpost April 5. Mr. Eban charged that he had been assured before the meeting that in view of Israel's previous apology for this incident, the reprimand would be deleted.

This was denied by the sponsors, who said they had merely agreed to note in the text that Israel had Roses, carnations, gladioli, and snapdragons composed the table centrepiece.

Mrs. Peter Merson, Maplewood Avenue, entertained twenty-four guests at a luncheon at Ruby Foo's, in honor of the approaching marriage of Miss Rosalind Elaine Beinhaker, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. I. Beinhaker, Circle Road, whose marriage to Philip Katz, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Katz, Wilson Avenue, will take place on June 24, at Shaare Zion Synagogue; and for Miss Barbara Bayla Rosen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abe Rosen, Maplewood Avenue, whose marriage to Charles Gomberg, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Gomberg, Dollard Avenue, will take place on June 26, at Young Israel Synagogue. Pastel-shaded roses, carnations, and sweet peas were used to decorate.

Mr. and Mrs. William Applebaum, Bloomfield Avenue, entertained thirty-five guests, members of the immediate families, in celebration of the engagement of their elder daughter, Miss Dorothy Applebaum, to Joseph Ghetler, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Ghetler, St. Urbain Street, whose marriage takes place on November 11, at Chevra Kadisha Synagogue. Mrs. Applebaum wore a cinnamon-brown lace dress, with a V-shaped neckline, and tunic-effect skirt; and Mrs. Ghetler wore a navy-blue two-piece crepe embroidered suit, fashioned with a V-shaped neckline, and slim skirt. Miss Applebaum wore a navy-blue chiffon dress, with low-cut neckline at the back, and a flared skirt. Roses, carnations, and sweet-peas were combined for the table decoration.

Miss Betty Zaracoff, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Zaracoff, Clay Hall Avenue, fiancee of Nathan Fershtenfeld, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Fershtenfeld, Villeneuve Street West, whose marriage takes place on November 18, at Beth David Synagogue, was entertained at a linen shower at the Bucharest. Receiving about one hundred and sixty-five guests were the hostesses: Mrs. F. Hops, Park Avenue, aunt of the bride-elect; Mrs. Max Fershtenfeld, Villeneuve Street West, mother of the groom-elect; and Mrs. T. Vechsler, Plamondon Avenue, sister of the bride-elect. Mrs. Hops wore a sheer chiffon dress, with a print in toning brown shades, cut with a square-cut neckline, and slim skirt, also a large straw hat; Mrs. Fershtenfeld, a green printed chiffon dress, with a V-shaped neckline and slim skirt, and a green straw hat; and Mrs. Vechsler, a two-piece navy-blue crepe suit, with a full skirt, and a jacket, with a Peter Pan collar, with a lime-colored flowered crepe blouse, and a white linen hat. Mrs. Zaracoff, mother of the bride-elect, wore a navy-blue crepe dress, with a high neckline and slim skirt, and mauve linen collar and cuffs, with a natural-colored straw hat. Miss Zaracoff, the honoree, wore a semi-cocktail-styled dress, in blue, with polka-dot insert, which had a Queen Anne Collar, with low-off-the-shoulder, decollete neckline, and bustle-back skirt; also a navy-blue and white straw hat, and orchid corsage. Gladioli, carnations, and snapdragons, with candles, composed the table adornment.

Ben-Gurion Chose Books In N.Y. Store

Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion, of Israel, took time off from an arduous schedule in New York and indulged in a favorite pursuit. For several hours until dusk fell he browsed among books in two stores and bought more than a score ranging from classic Greek literature and Chinese philosophy to selected plays of George Bernard Shaw.

Trailed by Capt. Ben Miller of the Police Department, and two aides, the 65-year-old Prime Minister, who is well known as a Greek scholar and particularly informed on Buddhist philosophy, strolled into the main store of Brentano's at 586 Fifth Avenue, one afternoon.

There was quick recognition and a scramble to serve him but the distinction fell to Miss Claire Selley, who had waited on him four years ago. Miss Selley and Mr. Ben-Gurion exchanged the Hebrew welcoming salutation of "Baruch Haaba!" Wearing a soft gray light topcoat and carrying a cane, he wandered from one department to another, withdrawing books from shelves. Occasionally he would pause several minutes for reading, completely oblivious of spectators.

At one point, he remarked that the store's information booth had been moved since he was last there. Miss Selley remarked aside to associates: "He knows the location of every shelf." That appeared to be an understatement as the Prime Minister moved with certainty to particular sections.

Among the score of books he purchased were the "Philosophy of Life," by Chen Lis Fu; "Genesis and Geology," by Charles Coulston Gillispie; "Light From the Ancient Past," by Jack Finegan; "Essays in Science and Philosophy", by Whitehead; "A Short History of Chinese Philosophy," by Fung Yulan.

On the modern side he selected "The Hinge of Fate," by Churchill; the biography of Louis D. Brandeis, by A. T. Mason; "Lincoln's War Cabinet," by Burton J. Hendrick; "Defense of the West", by B. H. Liddell Hart and "China Shakes the World," by Jack Belden.

His associates noted that the Prime Minister had one of the largest libraries in Israel, with a considerable representation of ancient Greek books. Before leaving the store, he requested that his purchases be delivered to him that day.

As he departed, Nixon Griffis, president of Brentano's, presented to him a rare edition of excerpts from a Bible printed in 1553 in Greek, Latin and Hebrew. Later the Prime Minister spent about an hour at Steckert-Hafner, publishers, 31 East Tenth Street, where he bought several more books before returning to his suite at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. He was to attend services at a synagogue near the hotel.

MONTREAL MARRIAGES

DATNOFF-RIVEN

The marriage of Miss Marjorie Riven, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Riven, de Vimy Avenue, to Joseph B. Datnoff, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Datnoff, of Burlington, Vermont, took place at three o'clock, on Sunday, April 15, at Adath Israel Synagogue. Rabbi Charles Bender, Reverend M. Mandelcorn, and Cantor E. Goldberger officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a period gown of lace, with pleated flounces of net, and her tulle illusion finger-tip veil was draped to a Juliet cap of braided lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias. Miss Lila Riven, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, wore a gown of Nile-green net over taffeta, embroidered and appliqued in the same shade. She had a small crown of beaded taffeta, with shoulder-length veil, and carried a colonial bouquet of mauve and purple sweet peas. Myron Datnoff, brother of the groom, was best man. Miss Esther Krashinsky played the organ during the ceremony. Floral arrangements adorned the synagogue. Mrs. Riven, mother of the bride, received in a cafe-au-lait chiffon gown, with small hat of tiny rose-coloured and white flowers, and a corsage of pink camellias. Mrs. Datnoff, mother of the groom, wore an aquamarine-blue crepe gown with embroidered lace bodice and hat to match, and an orchid corsage. Mrs. I. Riven, grandmother of the bride, wore a mauve faille gown, with lace bodice, a small hat, trimmed with lilacs, and an orchid corsage. A reception took place in the hall of the synagogue. The bride and groom left to spend their honeymoon in New York, the former wearing a navy-blue wool bolero suit, with white and navy-blue polka dot blouse, wide red satin cummerbund, navy-blue coat to match, a navy-blue straw hat, trimmed in red and white, and a corsage of red roses. They will reside in Burlington, Vermont. Abe Datnoff, brother of the groom, of Birmingham, Alabama; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Datnoff and son, Glen Morton, brother, sister-in-law, and nephew, of the groom; Miss Sonia Whitten, cousin of the groom, all of Hickory, North Carolina; Mrs. Jack Whitten, aunt of the groom, of Gastonia, North Carolina; Mrs. Barney Rubin, of Washington, D.C.; Mrs. Claire Huber, of Cleveland, Ohio; and Mrs. M. Z. Frank, aunt of the bride, of New York, were among the wedding guests.

100 Tons Of Documents Hold Clue To Murdered Missing

J. Donald Kingsley, Director-General of the International Refugee Organization, recently turned over control of the International Tracing Service (ITS) to the Allied High Commission of Germany. The turnover marked the end of the active search for the hundreds of thousands of Allied nationals reported missing at the end of World War Two, principally those who had disappeared into the concentration and slave labor camps of the Nazi Reich.

In the three years since it was brought into existence to coordinate all Allied tracing activities, ITS received over 220,000 individual requests from 100 countries. The fate of some 27,000 missing persons was established definitely, and for another 19,000, some evidence, though not conclusive, was uncovered. To the High Commission goes the task of completing the examination and processing of the 100 tons of captured Axis documents which furnished the major clues to the fate of the great army of men, women and children marked for extermination or slavery.

ITS, with its library of documents and its master card index of more than 10,000,000 names, will serve as a permanent information centre, helping to untangle the human and legal snarl that Hitler bequeathed to Europe. It has become, even for the Germans, one of the most authoritative sources for checking indemnification claims of former concentration camp inmates. In addition to its search for the missing, ITS also undertook the giant task of identifying the living and the dead. Among the living were the children, many of them kidnapped for the Germanization program. The dead were mainly those who lay in the unmarked mass graves, usually discovered near concentration camp sites.

This total operation, which newsmen have called the "greatest detective story in the world", led from the graves and cemeteries, through hospitals, factories, prisons and registry offices. Former Nazi officials were interrogated, evidence from the War Crimes Trials studied, and every scrap of paper analyzed. A bundle of papers used to light fires, old Nazi expense sheets, revealed the names of 1,100 of the murdered.

Sometimes patient investigation turned up striking evidence. One ITS field worker, attempting to identify the bodies in a mass grave, was "aided" by a dead Jewish doctor who had outwitted his Nazi captors. Through a chance conversation, the investigator learned that the doctor had placed into the mouth of each fellow prisoner who died in his camp a capsule containing a piece of paper on which was written the name, date and cause of death. Thus, another 3,000 names were added to the Master Card Index.

The hunt for the lost children of Europe was the province of a special division of ITS, the Child Search Branch. Of the 5,576 tracing requests received by Child Search, 4,808 cases were solved. Once a child was identified, the case was turned over to the Child Welfare Branch of IRO for disposition. IRO's Director-General, Mr. Kingsley, in announcing the turnover, saluted the "great humanitarian significance" of the work accomplished by ITS. "The importance of feeding and clothing refugees and re-establishing them firmly is evident", Mr. Kingsley said. "What is perhaps not so evident, and perhaps of equal importance, is the effect that successful tracing and reuniting of lost relatives has had on the morale of these unhappy people".

CHAPLAIN GETS U.S. AWARD FOR SERVICE UNDER FIRE

Chaplain Oscar M. Lifshutz has been awarded the U.S. Army's Bronze Star Medal for "meritorious service" in "the face of enemy action" in Korea during the early part of September, 1950, in the Natkong River sector. The first Jewish chaplain to be decorated since the outbreak of the Korean war, Chaplain Lifshutz was the second Jewish chaplain to reach Korea in the summer of 1950. He has been there ever since with the 2d U.S. Infantry Division. After his ordination by the Hebrew Theological College, in Chicago, Ill., Chaplain Lifshutz served as rabbi of Temple Emai Sholom, Chicago, before entering the chaplaincy. His first chaplaincy assignment was in Austria where he served with the U.S. Occupation Forces as adviser on DP affairs to the commanding general of the American forces. He was also director of the Jewish Welfare Board Hospitality Center in Vienna.

The National Jewish Welfare Board-sponsored Jewish Book Council of America awarded to: Judah Stampfer, a $100 prize for his "Jerusalem Has Many Faces," a book of poetry in English; $100 award for a work of Hebrew poetry to Aaron Zeitlin for his "Sherim U' Peomot", and one for the same amount to Ber Lappin for his volume of Yiddish poetry, "Der Fuller Krug." Soma Morgenstern won the fiction award of $250 for "The Testament of the Lost Son." The Harry Kovner poetry awards were set up in memory of the late Harry Kovner.

Official Language And Mother Tongue In The New Census

In the 1951 Census of Canada, to be taken this June, each person will be asked to state whether he speaks both official languages, i.e., English and French, English only, French only, or neither. In addition to the inquiry on official language, there will be a question on mother tongue. For census purposes, mother tongue is defined as the language first learned in childhood and still understood by the person. Information gathered in the census on this subject is useful in indicating the relative number and location of the people of various language groups in Canada.

Sixty-seven per cent of the population of 11,507,000 in 1941 spoke English only of the two official languages; 19 per cent spoke French only; 13 per cent spoke both official languages; and one per cent spoke neither English nor French. About 56 per cent in 1941 gave English as mother tongue while about 30 per cent reported French. Of the other languages spoken as mother tongue, German was the mother tongue of 322,000 persons; Ukrainian, the mother tongue of 313,000; Indian-Eskimo, reported by 131,000; Yiddish, 130,000; and Polish the mother tongue of 129,000.

As a result of the immigration since the War it is expected that there may be an increase in the number of persons of such mother tongues as Netherlands, Polish, Lithuanian, and other languages of peoples coming from the Baltic countries. The 1951 Census figures will show what changes there have been in languages spoken and mother tongue in the ten years since the census of 1941.

Information on mother tongue and official language spoken is used for a variety of purposes by churches, business and governments. It is an indication of how the numerous origin and language groups in the population are being assimilated, and is one means of measuring the progress of the various constituents in the population which are intermingling to produce the Canadian nation of the future. It is also a valuable measure of market potentials for certain commodities.

During the fiscal year ending on March 31, 1951, there were 85,356 immigrants who arrived in Canada. Each province received a share of these newcomers. Newfoundland received 244; Nova Scotia, 1,267; New Brunswick, 824; Prince Edward Island, 147; Quebec, 15,562; Ontario, 46,020; Manitoba, 3,824; Saskatchewan, 3,078; Alberta, 7,179; and British Columbia, 6,886.

The Yukon and the Northwest Territories were the destination of 25 immigrants.

It is estimated that 400,000 Canadians spend their leisure hours in making handicraft products, and the retail value of this production last year was more than $100,000,000. Canadians are the best users of Canada's own handicrafts. Sales to tourists through gift shops and booths in hotels and inland passenger steamers total about $9,000,000 annually.

To provide American educators with authoritative reports on the educational, cultural and religious life of Israel, a new periodical will be published by the American Jewish Conference of Academicians for Israel, the first issue to appear next September. Experts in the United States will prepare the material with the assistance of similar authorities in Israel. It will present factual reports on the school systems in Israel, the functions of the Israel Ministry of Religions, the work of scientific societies, and similar institutions and program.

Arthritis and rheumatism, second only to mental illness as human cripplers, cost Canadians the loss of three times as many working days as all strikes combined. Canadians suffering with rheumatic diseases mean an army of 30,000 constantly unemployed. Fight these crippling diseases by supporting the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, 74 Sparks Street, Ottawa, Ontario.

Village Of The Blind

This is no product of Wellsian fancy but just one more of those social experiments arising out of Operation Kibbutz Galuyot. The establishment of such a community is a daring, perhaps unique, but well-conceived attempt to solve the multiplicity of problems naturally associated with the rehabilitation and absorption of blind people. We are all familiar with the tradition of the useless, pitiable blind mendicants so prevalent in Oriental countries, and on another plane with the blind institutes of the Western countries.

Malben, the rehabilitation organization sponsored by the Government, the J.D.C. and the Jewish Agency, has there embarked on creating a complete village community of blind people, in an effort to give them the means to live constructive lives like any other human beings. Only a radical solution of this nature could succeed, in the difficult conditions at present obtaining in Israel, in giving these handicapped people an even chance to become useful independent citizens.

The village itself is situated near orange groves and vineyards, on the outskirts of Gedera, a country town in southern Israel. So far a hundred families have settled there, living in fifty wooden two-family houses. Each family has one spacious room, a kitchen and bathroom. Some household utensils were supplied to make the start easier. Each house is provided with a one-dunam plot of land sufficient for a vegetable garden and the keeping of a goat and hens, equipment for which is furnished to them, together with the services of a farming instructor, thus enabling them to augment the family income from their own backgardens.

A third of the inhabitants hail from Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Poland, while two-thirds are Yemenites, many more of whom are expected to come from the immigrant camps at Ein Shemer and Givat Shaul. Before coming to the village, the settlers undergo special training to enable them to start earning a living at once. For the time being they are employed in mattress and brush making and wickerwork, but the addition of other suitable trades, such as pottery and sewing, is envisaged.

One has to remember that many of them, especially those from European communities, had to change their trades where their former ones proved unsuitable. Others from Oriental groups had never worked before, and they are now gradually learning to assume responsibilities like every normal human being, instead of being a lifelong burden to their families and to themselves.

At present their output is purchased by Malben or the Jewish Agency, who are able to put their products to good use in the business of equipping new immigrants for their life in Israel. As their organization grows and they are able to furnish a greater variety of saleable articles, it is hoped to establish a co-operative marketing system.

The residents of the village fall into different groups, according to the types and degree of their blindness. There are those who have recovered from trachoma but lost their sight through it, and those who were blinded in the second World War and in concentration camps. Others can partly see, and can therefore do normal work.

A social worker resides permanently in the village, and it is her task to advise the women on household matters and tend the sick. In addition, a woman doctor pays a daily visit to the village, and an eye specialist is due to arrive in the near future, to examine cases where there exists any hope of restoring eyesight. The small children are under the care of a trained kindergarten nurse, while the older ones attend school in near-by Gedera.

The settlement is under the direction of Dr. Hagel, a lawyer from Poland who lost his eyesight in a Russian prisoner-of-war camp. He is a relatively young man who has to be a mixture of mukhtar (village headman — a concept left over from the days of Ottoman rule), arbiter, teacher, and sales manager to his sightless flock. He distinguishes each villager by his voice. His task is no easy one, for it involves bridging the gap between East and West.

This is indeed one of the few places where such a synthesis is being attempted, and as far as can be judged from the first beginnings, the result is successful. This is entirely due to Dr. Hagel's tact and firmness, his common sense and great psychological perception in understanding all the divergent and sometimes queer wishes of the inhabitants, who hail from such different environments.

The members of the Eastern community in particular rely to a large extent on his judgment. Dr. Hagel is loud in his praises of the willingness to learn and intelligence of the Yemenite women. They instantly grasp the need to be clean and tidy in their houses and in the care of their children, eagerly absorbing all the ideas so novel to them in the cleaning and preparation of food. In all their reactions there is evident a remarkable ease and independence of thinking.

Entirely on their own initiative, and without any previous instructions, some of them started planting tiny gardens adjoining their houses with vegetables and some of their Oriental spices. A young mother will proudly announce to her visitors that she is attending reading and writing classes. In a very short time they come to accept all the modern devices of Western civilisation, and have a clear picture of what they want to do with the money earned by their husbands. Usually they start buying furniture, curtains and tablecloths. Since they have learned the use of modern equipment, their dearest wish is to possess a gramophone and an icebox.

Their menfolk too, have quickly grasped the advantage of work. They rise at two in the morning for lengthy prayers, and long before the workshops are open, hurry there and wait. They work at high speed, and the foreman is hard-put at closing time to get them to stop work and go home.

The European members of the village are rather more reluctant to adapt themselves to their new surroundings. From their point of view, they have to do without too many of the modern comforts. Dr. Hagel is trying to solve all these social and cultural problems. He endeavours to create discussion groups where common problems can be aired, being of the opinion that the opportunity of talking things over takes the sting out of much bitterness.

Anything that is calculated to improve the quality of their lives is on the agenda for the future. A wireless set, books in Braille and a meeting-hall constitute some of their more immediate needs. They also require specially constructed typewriters and matrices and rulers to enable them to write short notes in Braille. Records, games and recorded 'talking books' are just some more of the things which could help to lighten their lives. Equipment and materials are needed for the classes which Dr. Hagel intends to open for advanced Hebrew and English. Machinery which would increase the earning capacity of the villagers is also wanted. It is by these small things that the struggling community can be kept happy and satisfied.

The surroundings of the village teem with new life. Clusters of little settlements are springing up, gardens are being planted, and hundreds of men from a near-by camp are busy clearing away thorns and thistles for the building of new roads. Children run busily about, picking figs and sabras (cacti), and offer them to passers-by. As everywhere in Israel, this place will no doubt develop at an amazing rate, and the first obstacles, it is hoped, will soon be overcome, says the Zionist Newsletter.

There are 10 rules that should be kept in mind by the over-forties. They are: Keep slim. Take plenty of milk, whole-grain cereals, fruits and vegetables. Drink plenty of water. Limit the intake of sugars and fats. Try new foods. Make new friends. Adopt new hobbies. Get plenty of fresh air. Exercise moderately but regularly. Don't worry and don't lose your temper.

Reilly, Helen Channing Pollock, Galen Bogue, Audrey Wood, Marcus Heiman, Augustus Pitou and Mrs. Bayard Veiller. Also Lew Leslie, Ann Andrews, Louis Cline, Lee Shubert, John Golden, Arthur Caesar, Mrs. F. Ray Comstock, Katharine Cornell, Guthrie McClintoc, Hi Rubin, Conrad Nagel and Michael Todd.

Foods that supply proteins, so necessary for the maintenance of body tissue, include meats, chicken, fish, cheese, milk and eggs. Among the protein-rich foods of vegetable origin are peanut butter, bread and bread products, whole-grain cereals and navy beans.

The sudden death of a small infant is often ascribed to "mechanical suffocation", an accident such as bedclothes lying over the baby's face. In many cases it has been discovered that the cause was actually some form of respiratory disease. At the first sign of such disease in a baby, a doctor should be consulted. No adult suffering from cold or cough should be allowed to come in contact with a small baby.

Many famous people including statesmen, monarchs, men and women of arts and letters have lived to an advanced age with unimpaired faculties and surprisingly youthful physical condition. The reason is that they haven't given themselves time to grow old. Even after they have retired from their regular occupation, they have kept an alert interest in current affairs, hobbies and reasonable activity.

When doing sedentary work, get up once in a while and stretch, just as the family cat does. Stretching helps to ward off fatigue and that "loggy" feeling.

LAKE SIMCOE HOMES AND PROPERTIES
Jackson's Point, Ontario

Lake Simcoe is located approximately 40 miles north of the City of Toronto, and is the closest country-homes district for that City. Mr. D. H. Christian is putting under development there large and improved areas in sub-division plans and in building.

The company plans to set up a model community or village there, designed to have every attraction to make it a very fine community, and based on similar lines to a project developed in London, Ontario, and partly from our observation of like plans in Florida.

The 200-acre project will have, through the assistance of the planner and architect, Mr. Igor Polevitsky, fine recreation areas where the employment of trained counsellors and guides will prevail. Wading pools, playground equipment, and so on, and training-under-supervision, will bring about a Taylor-Statton camp site right on the property.

With 200 acres beautifully treed, and with adjoining winding roads that may be used as bridle paths, we propose that our roads will have a bridle path area or trail along each of them. An area for a small golf course will be donated; and in general, our project, while in the planning stage at the moment, is designed to attract people away from the old, and in many cases, 40- and 50-year-old cottages which they were forced to buy, as there was nothing else available then. Up to now, no planned communities have been built or planned for them.

This present project is designed to fit the smaller business man, and our anticipated price limit of home will be in the $9000 price class. It will be equipped in every case with all city conveniences, and bathrooms. We anticipate that artesian well water will be supplied. Completely modern planning now being done for us by Mr. Igor Polevitsky, the famed Florida architect, will be used in each home, however modest the price.

Lots will be large, and driveways will be so designed to reduce speed to the lowest levels; and safety for children and adults will be emphasized. A planned shopping area to supply services required by the community, is now being set up.

We are creating a high-class area for the enjoyment and comfort of our friends, in a brand-new and uncluttered location.

For appointment to inspect our plans, call Mr. D. H. Christian, owner:

The Faith Of A Liberal

It is difficult to define a Liberal specifically and definitely. The reason for it is the fact that there are varying degrees of Liberalism even as there are varying degrees of Conservatism. But for the most part, the Conservative is he who believes in the established order.

For the Conservative, the institutions that have come down through the ages are the best institutions and have even a kind of sacredness attached to them. These, therefore, must not be disturbed.

The Liberal, on the other hand, is not a person who is interested in destroying something, or tearing to pieces, as many believe; rather is he solely interested in finding the truth about things. It may be that the Liberal will often have to remove old landmarks in order to build new ones. This is not destruction, but helpful progress. The Religious Liberal is he who believes things should be changed when no longer adequate or found to be untrue. He does not believe that there is sacredness attached to anything that forbids analysis.

The law of life is change. How illogical are the Conservatives when they fail to recognize the element of "change" in religion! We have not felt it a matter of reproach to our fathers to supplant the candle with electric light; nor the mouth-to-mouth communication with the telephone and radio. Certainly, in government and education the principle of change is recognized. Why not in religion? The Religious Liberal believes that the finalities of the religious life have not been wholly discovered. No discovery of facts has ever made the God of the Universe smaller, but always more wonderful and marvelous.

The first element in the faith of a Liberal is the application of the scientific attitude toward religion. Thus the Bible for him is a human book, inspired by the Divine, covering a period of a thousand years. The Bible for the Liberal is the spiritual biography of a people. This people in various ages was in quest of the good life. Applying the scientific attitude, the Liberal finds in the Bible not one story of creation but many creation narratives. For the most part, they are poetical expressions of the current belief of the time in which they were written.

To the Liberal in religion, God is indefinable. The Liberal in his faith is he who has caught the majestic movements of the planets and stars; the marvelous behavior of atoms with their electrons and protons; and the far-flung development from an amoeba to an Isaiah, and interprets anew the glory of God. The second element in the faith of a Liberal is the emphasis on the good of life. Not creed but deed is the import in modern religion. The failure in religion has not been the poverty of thought. The real atheist is not he who differs in his opinion from the creed of his faith, but he who testifies to his belief in his creed and goes out and lives a questionable life among his fellowmen. Character and moral conduct must ever be stressed in modern belief.

The third factor in the faith of a Liberal is humanity. Not the geographical Zion but the spiritual Zion is the ultimate goal of the Liberal Jew.

MENUHIN

At his death, the concerto passed back into the family's hands, where, Mr. Menuhin felt, it had been preserved intact, according to the Herald Tribune.

The first movement is written Allegro Molto, and the second Andante Non Troppo. The composer changed his mind several times over the tempo at the beginning to the second movement. At first he began it Adagio, and wrote nine bars, but drew a vehement "X" over that portion. He began again, Andante, but after eleven-and-a-half bars, drew a fine diagonal line through them. On the third try, he continued the exquisite composition to the end.

Mr. Menuhin said he had not yet practiced this concerto, because it had not been copied on durable stock. He will play only the two movements, and not now begin the third.

in their own hand would take place at the same time as the coming of the Messiah. In the meantime, according to their beliefs, the Jewish people had to live in dispersion. Some of the zealots have gone so far as to move across the border into Jordan to await the Messiah's coming.

The attempt on the Knesset was believed to have been made because Parliament was considering a bill that will allow certain types of work on the Sabbath and will later take up a bill granting equal rights to women. Both bills have been opposed by religious leaders.

The zealots' latest series of car burnings coincided with the recent bitter debate on the conscription of religious women for service in the army. Although the conscription bill was adopted, its die-hard opponents have kept up the fight. A group of extreme rabbis petitioned the Knesset members to halt conscription, threatening a "fast and holy war" if they were not heeded, reports the New York Times.

First U.S.-Born Rabbi Helped To Guide Columbia

Dr. Grayson Kirk, acting president of Columbia University, paid tribute to "the first American born Jewish minister of religion" who served for thirty years as a trustee of Columbia College. Recalling a statement made by the late Nicholas Murray Butler in 1941, Dr. Kirk said that Rabbi Gershom Mendes Seixas, the first American rabbi, "at the close of the eighteenth century was one of Columbia College's most distinguished and useful trustees." In addition to being "a truly great rabbi, Seixas, who, incidentally, was the first rabbi to preach in English in a Hebrew synagogue," Dr. Kirk stated, "played a very large part in the intellectual life of New York and he played a very effective part in the guidance and development of Columbia College."

The tribute was offered during a brief ceremony held before the portrait of Rabbi Seixas, which hangs in Columbia's Earl Hall. A delegation representing the New York Board of Rabbis, participated. The delegation, which represented the organization's more than 500 Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform rabbis in New York State and environs, consisted of Rabbi Morris M. Goldberg, president; Rabbi David de Sola Pool, a past president, who, as rabbi of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, now holds the pulpit in which Rabbi Seixas served; and Rabbi Harold H. Gordon, general secretary. Rabbi Isidor Hoffman, counselor to Jewish students at Columbia University, also took part in the ceremony.

Rabbi Gershom Mendes Seixas was born in New York City, January 14, 1746. He was the son of Isaac Mendes Seixas, who had escaped from the Inquisition in Portugal and came to New York City in 1730. Because no rabbinical academy nor ordained rabbi was to be found in the colonies at this time, Gershom Mendes Seixas prepared himself for the rabbinate unaided. By the summer of 1768, at the age of 23, he qualified as the minister of the New York Jewish community.

When, during the American Revolutionary War, New York City fell into the hands of the British, Rabbi Seixas, who was a strong supporter of George Washington and the American cause, refused to live under British domination. He ordered his synagogue closed and, with most of his leading members, moved to Philadelphia where he stayed for most of the war. Because of his dedication to the patriotic cause and his devotion to Washington, Rabbi Seixas was one of the clergymen selected to be present at the inauguration of George Washington as first president of the United States.

Rabbi Seixas gave thirty years of service as trustee of Columbia College, attending 127 meetings of the board from December 2, 1784, to July 18, 1814. He was also one of the incorporators of Columbia University.

are still being worked out, Dr. Cheresky said, and the program, which is frankly an experiment, will be expanded slowly and continually revised. Eventually it may include as many as 500 families, he said, and after a few years at that scale the experiment should show whether the integrated approach can prevent sickness more effectively than the purely medical approach.

This integrated approach was conceived seven years ago by the Community Service Society, which is concerned with social welfare work but not with medicine. After H. I. P. was established, it afforded a large group of persons comprehensive medical care, and thus provided a base to which a social welfare and health program might be added, it was explained by Mr. Davies. The C.S.S. made a grant of $45,000 to Montefiore for the first year of the experiment.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons is taking part in a consultative capacity.

Bible In English Revised By 31 Scholars

A final draft of the first four books of the Old Testament was presented by Dr. Luther A. Weigle, dean emeritus of Yale Divinity School, to William R. McCulley, president of Thomas Nelson & Sons, publishers, who are scheduled to issue a revised version of the Old Testament in September, 1952. The presentation was made in the offices of the publishing firm, 19 East Forty-Seventh Street, New York.

Dr. Weigle is chairman of the Standard Bible Committee, which is composed of thirty-one Biblical scholars who have been working on the revised version for the last fourteen years. The committee's work is under the auspices of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States, a federation of twenty-nine Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations with more than 32,000,000 members.

The new Bible is the authorized revision of the King James version of 1611 and the American Standard Version of 1901. In 1928 the International Council of Religious Education appointed a committee to inquire into the feasibility of combining the beauty of the King James version with the accuracy of the American version, and the present revision is an outgrowth of this.

Dr. Weigle emphasized that his committee has revised only the English translation of the Bible, says the New York Herald Tribune. "The Scriptures were written in Hebrew and Greek, and what we have been revising is the English translation of the Bible—the English words, phrases and sentences which are used to express the meaning of the Hebrew and Greek," Dr. Weigle said.

He explained that many of the old English expressions found in the present version of the Bible have lost meaning for modern readers. "But what is more important to rectify," he said, "is the great number of words and phrases which have changed their meaning and now convey an entirely erroneous impression."

CANADIAN SPORTS PARADE

WHO said lacrosse is Canada's "forgotten game?" Current plans for 1951 (as we learned from Chuck Rowan, Secretary-Treasurer of the Ontario Lacrosse Association) give the lie to the old catch phrase. Whatever the prophets of gloom may say, lacrosse is today very much alive. We admit the game has taken a back seat to football, hockey and baseball due, partially, to the strong commercialization of these sports in recent years, but right now lacrosse seems slated for a healthy revival.

Growth in Ontario

Under the aegis of the O.L.A., lacrosse is particularly flourishing in the Senior A League towns (Peterborough, Brampton, Toronto, Hamilton and and St. Catharines) and in those of the Border City loop (Sarnia, Wallaceburg, Windsor and Chatham). Both are looking forward to a bangup season.

According to Chuck Rowan, there is little fear for the future as far as players are concerned. The O.L.A. has 120 minor lacrosse teams, with a constant flow of youngsters in the peewee and bantam classes.

From Chuck Rowan we also learned that the old bugaboo of stuffy, indoor playing space is gradually being overcome as more and more air-conditioned arenas are being built and this season Dundas, Alliston and Brampton (an 80-year old Club) will boast brand new buildings for Canada's national game. Many Ontario cities and towns are either discovering lacrosse for the first time or experiencing a revival of interest in the game and the O.L.A. is considering additional league teams from Ottawa, Parry Sound and Sault Ste. Marie.

Asked about the injury element in lacrosse, Chuck Rowan pointed out that strict supervision of the leagues has practically eliminated unwarranted rough play. Lacrosse today, he figures, is a much safer game to play than either football or hockey. Speaking of hockey, Rowan said: "Few sportsmen will deny the great contribution lacrosse has made to the game of hockey. Speed being the common denominator of the two games, good lacrosse players usually make fine hockey players."

Indian Baggataway:

Christened "lacrosse" by the French Canadian pioneers who first saw the Indians playing their wide-open game of "baggataway," using what appeared (to the Frenchmen) to be webbed crosses as sticks, the game caught on quickly with both the French and English settlers. No doubt its rough reputation came from the fact that the Indians used the technique of first crippling as many opposing players as possible before getting on with the game. Medicine men acted as referees (and goalposts), and often as many as 200 players appeared on a team, while the "field" ranged in width from 5 to 10 miles as the game moved in course of play, referees, "goalposts" and all.

Box Lacrosse:

Lacrosse became our national game by Act of Parliament in 1867 and the National Lacrosse Association was formed as the ruling body. Rules and regulations were drawn up by the N.L.A. (now known as the Canadian Lacrosse Association) and the game was "confined" to a field 80 yards long by 60 wide. In 1932 field lacrosse was converted, more or less, to the indoor game now known as boxla and was played in hockey cushions (both indoors and out). Strongly in favour of boxla are the closer proximity of the fans and the increased body contact, both of which make for a finer spectator sport.

With the new, air-conditioned arenas and the general air of prosperity now apparent in the O.L.A., there is every sign that lacrosse may even return to its old time popularity. Chuck Rowan says if you've never seen lacrosse and what it has to offer, take in a game. A buck to a plug nickel says you'll be back for more.
